Action Plan

If your answers were not the best, do not worry. Use those answers as a starting place for improvement. Choose goals from the following list you would like to strive toward in your family. Start with reasonable goals (i.e., “at least three servings of produce per day”) so you are not overwhelmed. As your family adjusts, move on to the healthiest habits (i.e., “at least five servings of produce per day”).

Healthy Eating

Fruits and Vegetables

- Children eat at least three to five servings of produce per day.
- Buy fresh fruits and vegetables each week.
- Visit the local farmer’s market each week.

Unhealthy Choices

- Children limit unhealthy snacks to one to three servings per day.
- Children limit soda and high-sugar drinks to one per day.
- Make it easier for children to choose healthy snacks.
- Children limit unhealthy convenience food to three times weekly.
- Limit unhealthy snacks bought at the store to one item per trip.
- Limit eating out to three times per week.

Healthy Meals

- Children eat a healthy breakfast every day.
- Children bring a healthy lunch to school three times per week.
- Serve appropriate portions at all meals.
- Promote healthy food options in the school.
- Replace dessert with healthy options (fruit, sorbet, etc.) three times per week.
- Plan healthy meals in advance each week.
- Purchase items for those meals in advance each week.

Physical Activity

- Walk children to school, church or library at least once a week.
- Let each child choose a family physical activity once each week.
- Make walking the dog the children's or family's responsibility.
- Reward children for good behavior with fun physical activities (bowling, batting cages, etc.).
- Make active chores part of the children's responsibilities.
- Create active alternatives for children not interested in sports (walking, tag, etc.).

Screen Time

- Manage family free time without screen time.
- Limit TV time to two hours per day per child.
- Limit video game time to 30 minutes per day per child.
- Limit entertainment computer time to 30 minutes per day per child.
