Paid Research Assistant Positions Available

The Institute for Autism Research (iar) at Canisius University is offering an opportunity for energetic, enthusiastic, and dedicated students to gain valuable research experience in our clinical trial of an afterschool social skills program and school-based program.

The Research Assistant Intern position plays a critical role in supporting and evaluating our social skills interventions for school-age autistic students (7-12). Responsibilities include monitoring program fidelity, supporting program staff, collecting and scoring research assessments, and managing databases. There is also the opportunity for direct assessment of autistic children applying to participate in our intervention programs. The commitment runs in two waves, from approximately September through January and February through June. Interns are paid approximately $2500 per wave ($16.67/hour, 10 hours/week for 15/weeks per wave). Overall scheduling can be flexible but potential Research Assistants should be available at least 2 afternoons (between approximately 3:00-5:30 PM) per week to support programs at schools. Interns must have reliable transportation to Canisius University for training, supervision, and data work and to go to schools implementing programs.

Recruitment is competitive and interviews are held on a rolling basis. For questions about this position, please email: rodgers1@canisius.edu
